stocks.

To some extent the strength of the market was a reflection of the advances shown in the London market, which was fairly buoyant on the news of the satisfactory progress of Lord Roberts' army in South Africa. It was also the opinion that the bank statement would take a fairly satisfactory showing, and this also was a factor in the dealings.

The bank statement was the only break in the monotony and that had very little effect on the market. For quarter hours tegether there were almost no sales and the total business for the day was probably the smallest of the year. Even the professionals were afraid to make rentures on either side of the market and the commission business was limited to a few hundred shares. The closing prices showed only fractional changes some adadvances and some declines. There is nothing significant in this except that it is exactly the condition which usually precedes an upward movement in the market—dullan upward movement in the market-dull-FORK. ..... 12.13 2 17 12.85 11.50 The bank statement was not a disap-

There was an increase in cash despite the export of gold, but the immense loans cut the surplus reserves down more than a million dollars. The figures are in reality very good. They will have no bad effect on next week's speculation. Reserves decreased $1,095,800; loans increased $13,221,400; specie increased $2,010,900; legals increased $1,166,800; deposits increased $17,092,800; circulation increased $89,800. April gross earnings as far as they have April gross earnings as far as they have yet been compiled are a telling argument against the calamity howlers. Thirty lines for the month show gross earnings of $15,-121,951, an increase of $1,732,423 or approximately 13 per cent. During the fourth prxoimately 13 per cent. During the fourth week of April the gross earnings of twenty-seven lines were $4.145.252, an increase of $444.046 or 12 per cent. It is perhaps needless to allude again to the fact that the net earnings generally have also been highly satisfactory despite the very heavy expenditures for improvements that have been made nearly everywhere. The outlook for net earnings moreover is even more rosy than that for gross during the coming six months on account of the possibility that materials will be reduced in price in the near future.

The only gossip that approached the point of excitement was that regarding the sugar company. Again the story is told that the Sugar war is ended, and this itme there are creditable people behind the statement. It is said that there will be news regarding a deal some time rext week. Sugar stock did not respond with much alacrity to the gossip, but it made a slight gain for the day.

SALE OF THE POLK MANSION. The Former President's Home in Speculators' Hands.

(From the Pittsburg Dispatch.) (From the Pittsburg Inspaces,)
Nashville, Tenn., April 18.—Within the last few days the Polk Place, the home of former President James K. Polk, has been sold twice in a building boom that has appeared in Nashville. It was first been sold twice in a building boom that has appeared in Nashville. It was first purchased of Judge J. M. Dickinson, of Chicago, by Frederick W. Brown, of Buffalo, N. Y., an architect, who is here temporarily supervising the erection of a hospital, for the sum of $20,000. The purpose of the purchaser was to erect on the site a modern apartment house and to sub-divide the balance of the grounds and dispose of the subdivisions as residence sites. Shortly after the deal was completed. J. pose of the subdivisions as residence sites.

Shortly after the deal was completed, J. Craig McLenahan, of this city, heard of the New Yorker's plans and began negotiating for the place. Mr. McLenahan had purchased property directly across the street on which he proposed to erect an apartment house, and two such buildings were out of proportion to the demand. He purchased the home of the President at a slight advance and will hold it in hone ments for them bodies.

Many a man shut up in a cell has saved his mind by inventing some trifling amusement. It is recorded that one set a daily watch on the movement of a spider. Another tried how many times he had to toss five pins before they fell in just the same way. Another tried to run ten miles each day in his narrow limits. Yet another busied himself inventing new arrangements for their orders.

Yet I know of one manager who kept most of his animals, those of Woodward's Gardens, San Francisco, alive, healthy, and happy from the beginning of his time to the end, sixteen years later, when the establishment was broken to when the establishment was broken up and the animals were ordered to be shot in their cages. The great secret of his success, he tells me, was caring for their minds as well as for their bodies.

Many a man shut up in a cell has saved street on which he proposed to erect an apartment house, and two such buildings were out of proportion to the demand. He purchased the home of the President at a slight advance and will hold it in hope of making a sale to the State of Tennessee for a Governor's mansion or to some local patriotic organization whose members have expressed a desire to perpetuate the home's association with the distinguished Tennesseean.

The sale of the property recalls the unusual will which President Polk left regarding his home, the first of the kind if, instead of "human captives," we read ever recorded. He prized the place very highly, and on his death was buried in a very fair portrait of what we may see one corner of the large lawn and a handsome tomb was erected over his grave. In his will he provided that the place should be the property of his wife during her lifetime, but on her death the Tennessee Leguslature should assume control and select
